International Journal for Theory and Analysis of Literature and Communication

Volume 40, Number 1    March 2019

Special Cluster: Why, How, and Where Literature?
Tamar Hager and Omri Herzog, Guest Editors

Introduction: Why, How, and Where Literature?
Omri Herzog, Cultural Studies Department, Sapir College, Israel
Tamar Hager, Education Department and the Program of Gender Studies, Tel-Hai College, Israel

The End of Literature; or, What Purposes Does It Continue to Serve?
Itamar Eizen-Zohar, Universität Tel Aviv
Elias J. Torres Feijó, Universidade de Santiago de Compostela
Antonio Monegal, Universitat Pompeu Fabra

“If They Cannot Take It Straight, They Will Get It in Fiction”:
The Power of Literature
Tamar Hager, Tel-Hai College, Israel

From the Margins of the Neoliberal University: Notes Toward Nomadic Literary Studies
Neil Valletty, University of Otago, New Zealand

The Discipline of Literature as Superfluity
Hanna Soker-Schwager, Department of Hebrew Literature, Ben-Gurion University of the Negev, Israel

Talmud as Novel: Dialogic Discourse and the Feminine Voice in the Babylonian Talmud
Moshe Simon-Shoshan, Bar-Ilan University, Israel

Expressive Realism and the Phenomenological Turn:
A Canon for Postcritical Literary Studies
Matthew Flaherty, Bard High School Early College, Baltimore
Book Review

Edited by Eyal Segal

Where the Transmedial Things Are
Review of Jan-Noël Thon, Transmedial Narratology and Contemporary Media Culture
David Ciccoricco, University of Otago, New Zealand 159

New Books at a Glance

Edited by Eyal Segal

Dorothee Birke, Writing the Reader: Configurations of a Cultural Practice in the English Novel 167
Mari Hatavara, Matti Hyvärinen, Maria Mäkelä, and Frans Mäyrä, eds., Narrative Theory, Literature, and New Media: Narrative Minds and Virtual Worlds 169
Julian Hanebeck, Understanding Metalepsis: The Hermeneutics of Narrative Transgression 172
Frank Kelleter, ed., Media of Serial Narrative 174

Notes on Contributors 179